Donna's project description is interesting...

"I found my inspiration is from a Kissing Horses horseshoe heart. I started in the bottom V of the heart. The heart is done in Milanese, a pattern called Horseshoe. The threads from the left horse head come down and are used in the leaf and stem. The threads from the right horse come out and some are used in the flower. The remaining threads are cloth stitched to the top and form the mane. The flower, leaf, stem, and butterflies are in Rosalibre."
